Competition System

Poomsae

Cut-off system, preliminary round, semifinal, and final round. In the preliminary round, the participant practices only one poomsae. In the semifinal and final round the participant practices two poomsae. From the preliminaries $\frac{1}{2}$ of participants with higher score go to the semifinals. 8 of the best participants go to the final round.

The organizer reserves the right to adjust the number of poomsae in the semifinals according to the current situation (i.e. keeping the time schedule and the planned end of the tournament).

Individual divisions Under 30 A and B, Juniors A and B

Combined system: cut-off system for the preliminary round and semifinal, followed by an elimination system in the final round. In the final round, Chung and Hong (blue and red) perform simultaneously.

Seeding of Contestants

- If a semifinal round is held in the division, the matchups will be determined according to the ranking in the semifinal: 1–8, 4–5, 2–7, 3–6.
- If the division is held only as a final round using the elimination system (eight or fewer contestants), seeding will be based on the World Poomsae Ranking, with the highest-ranked contestants seeded first. For contestants without a ranking, results from previous domestic tournaments will be taken into account; the remaining contestants will be drawn by lot.

If fewer than eight contestants participate in a division, the organizer may decide to change the system to a cut-off system.
